STRICKEN WHILE 'DUELING'

Tyrone Power Dies While Acting in Film in Madrid

MADRID, Spain (AP)—Tyrone Power was stricken Saturday by a heart attack at the height of a dueling scene on a movie set and died an hour later.

The dark, handsome stage and screen star was 44.

Power's death was a tragic duplicate of that of his actor father, Frederick Tyrone Power, who was stricken fatally on a Hollywood movie set in 1931.

A virtual stranger in recent years to Hollywood where he made his fame and fortune, Power was here for the filming of "Solomon and Sheba" with Italian actress Gina Lollobrigida.

In the role of Solomon, Power showed up on the set for a dueling scene with George Sanders, 52, a movie veteran. Sanders, playing the role of Solomon's elder brother was to be killed in the duel.

During the filming, Power complained of a pain in his left arm and abdomen. The pain had been recurring for several days.

He suddenly broke off the action, lit a cigarette, and said:

"I've got to stop. I don't feel well."

Then he walked to his dressing room on the set, and the company nurse was called.

Ten minutes later, as stunned actors stood aside, Producer Tedd Richmond took Power to the hospital in Miss Lollobrigida's Mercedes sedan, which was parked just in front of Power's dressing room.

Director King Vidor halted shooting. Spanish extras left the scene solemnly. The entire staff was shaken when the news came that Power was dead.

Richmond was at Power's bedside when death came. He then left to tell Power's third wife, the former Mrs. Deborah Minardos, 26. Married to Power early this year, she is expecting a child in February.

Power's previous marriages to French actress Annabella — Baronne Georgette Charpentier—and actress Linda Christian ended in divorce.

Power was born in Cincinnati, Ohio, May 5, 1913, according to his studio and the Motion Picture Almanac. What's Who listed the year as 1914.

First Role at 7

He had his first stage role at 7. After he was graduated from high school in Cincinnati he began preparing for a theatrical career instead of going to college. He studied Shakespearian drama under his father.

The family moved to Hollywood, where his father was at work on "The Miracle Man" when fatally stricken.

Convinced he never could get a break in the movies, young Power turned to stock company work in Chicago. But in 1936 he got his break with a 20th Century-Fox contract.

With his success in "Lloyds of London," he was on his way to stardom. He was a romantic figure, and his name was linked with the beauties of the film capital—Sonja Henie, Janet Gaynor, Arleen Whelan, Loretta Young and Norma Shearer.

He starred in such box office attractions as "Alexander's Ragtime Band," "Marie Antoinette," "Rose of Washington Square," "Jesse James," "Johnny Apollo," "The Rains Came," "Brigham Young," "The Mark of Zorro," "The Eddy Duchin Story"; and "The Sun Also Rises."

Tops at Box Office

Power was the top box office star of Hollywood in 1938 and 1940. When World War II came, he shucked his career and in 1942 enlisted as a private in the Marines at San Diego.

He was discharged in 1945 as a lieutenant.

Saturday night Power's body was transferred by funeral coach from the hospital to the U.S. Three Jim Air Force base. Funeral services will be held there Sunday.

The widow intends to fly to Hollywood in a chartered plane with the body. The date of departure has not been fixed.

Miss Lollobrigida said Power had ordered her dressing room on the set only a short time before he was taken ill and given her "his usual good-natured, jovial 'Good morning.'"

"I have never met a more generous man, a finer professional companion, or a more thoughtful actor," she said in a statement.

Annabella Says Power 'Wonderful'

PARIS (AP) — Annabella, Tyrone Power's first wife, said Saturday that "he was a man of wonderful kindness."

"He had friends wherever he went," the French actress said. "I was horribly sad to learn that he had left us so suddenly. Only last week we were together in Madrid, where he was shooting.

"He had invited me. He absolutely wanted to introduce me to his new little wife, whom he adored. For me, he is an irreplaceable friend who has disappeared. Worse still, is that his wife is expecting a child. And he would so much have wished that it would be a little boy."

Annabella, whose real name is Suzanne Georgette Charpentier, gave her reactions by telephone to Paris reporters. She is in the Lower Pyrenees.

'Radium' Man Upsets Tyler

TYLER, Tex. (AP)—Amateur scientist, Johnny Pierce may suffer from radium exposure but he did not contaminate others with radioactive cobalt, a health officer said Saturday night.

Pierce, 18, remained in a hospital while more equipment was sent here to check his condition. The radium came from the hospital where he worked.

Dr. Jesse Goldfeder, director of Tyler's City-County Health Unit, said the youth changed his earlier story about spilling liquid cobalt on his hands.

"He since has told us he had several radium needles, which are much more dangerous to a person handling them," the physician said.

"However, I don't seriously that he could pass on this radiation by coming in contact with other persons or places."

Qualified observers said there never was any evidence of public concern over radioactive contamination in this East Texas city. If any existed, it quickly subsided.

Ordered to Scrub

Before learning about the radium needles health authorities ordered several individuals to scrub vigorously with soap and water because of exposure to young Pierce. They prescribed the same treatment for eight or more business establishments.

One firm is a drug store owned by W. D. Hughes, 72, a neighbor of the Pierce family. A pay telephone remained out of use there Saturday night awaiting arrival of a repairman to help scrub it clean, Hughes said.

"I'm not at all worried about any danger," the druggist added. "We've scoured the soda fountain where he had something to drink, and they tell us everything is perfectly safe.

"If it wasn't, I'd lock the doors like they totale health specialists at first wanted us to. We feed about 100 school children back every day, and I couldn't like that chance."

Unavailable

Pierce, a Tyler Junior College student who works parttime at Goldfeder Surgical Supply, was unavailable to newsmen. He is studying to be an X-ray technician.

Goldfeder barred newsmen from the youth's room in the hospital.

To an inquiry whether Pierce was in technical custody, the health officer replied:

"He's a health hazard, and we have confined him in a hospital."

Goldfeder again said, however, that there was no danger from radioactive contamination. He declined to name the persons or places getting scrub-up orders after the state health department and the Atomic Energy Commission were notified.

Douglas Thornton, 15, a fellow student and pal of Pierce, said he was one of those taking a bath by official order.

"I stayed in my room nearly a whole day and got somebody to bring me my meals until I was sure it was all right to get out," he said.

Soap and Water

Young Pierce told a doctor Wednesday he had suffered exposure to radioactivity the night before, Thornton related, and the physician also prescribed soap and water for Pierce.

That morning the youth's mother, Thurston said, the latter's rooming house to tell him the same story. They went to a motel and Pierce showered briefly, Thornton said.

Meanwhile Pierce's physician had notified health authorities. Pierce went to work at the hospital. Officers stopped him there as he was starting to leave for classes at the junior college.

Vincent Leupe, an AEC investigator who worked on the case, said on his return to Albuquerque Saturday night that Pierce had given him a signed statement saying he borrowed a needle of radium from the hospital where he worked.

Wants Alpha Rays

Pierce's statement said he wanted to obtain alpha rays from the radium needle, but was unable to do so because of a coating. When he removed the coating, the AEC said, "he was quite surprised to find that the radium wasn't in solid form but a dust."

It was the scattering of this dust that contaminated Pierce.

While not as deadly as the isotope cobalt-60, the AEC said, radium is still dangerous. Any possession of radium isn't contrary to AEC rules or federal law, the AEC said it is no longer interested in the case.

The needle which Pierce said he borrowed is of the kind doctors implant in the flesh where radium can help, emitting X-rays but with the alpha rays blocked off.

Goldfeder said Pierce ate some food after getting the radium on his hands and "we don't know yet how much he has inside of him."

5 Who Parachuted From C-119 Found

Russian 'Test' Plan Rejected

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States rejected Saturday Russia's proposed five-point treaty for ending nuclear weapons tests. It declared the Soviet Union was asking this country "to buy a pig in a poke."

The main intent of the Soviet draft treaty," the State Department declared, "is to conclude an agreement on a permanent cessation of nuclear weapons tests without an agreement being reached on a control system necessary to verify the paper pledge.

"In effect the Soviet Union is asking the United States to buy 'a pig in a poke.'"

The statement asserted the United States is ready and willing to make an agreement, in talks now under way at Geneva on discontinuing the testing of nuclear weapons, if the agreement specifically spells out the details of an adequate control system.

The statement was issued here a few hours after the Soviets announced the introduction of the proposed treaty at the Geneva Conference. The United States, Britain and Russia — the world's nuclear powers — are represented there.

A summary of the five points by Russia's Tass News Agency said the treaty would commit the three powers to conduct no more weapons tests after their agreement was signed.

It also provided that they would agree to set up control machinery within a network of control posts — but it appeared that the agreement halting tests would become effective before the control machinery could be established.

Other provisions called for the three powers to get other nations to adopt similar commitments, for specific acceptance of control posts on the territories of the powers and for no time limit to be placed on the discontinuance of testing.

The treaty proposal and the United States declaration that it is unacceptable meant that the Geneva talks are still at deadlock as they were when they began two weeks ago.

West Seeks Clues To Russian Intent

GENEVA (AP)—Western delegates sought Saturday night to determine whether the Russians are trying to compel the test ban conferences in Geneva into a big power foreign ministers' meeting.

The Russians privately denied such an intention. It was clear, however, that the subject has not been raised inside the conference rooms.

Because the talks on nuclear test suspension and surprise attack problems are both deadlocked, some observers believe that Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, U.S. Secretary of State Dulles, and British Foreign Secretary Selwyn Lloyd might need to turn up before the negotiations can get rolling.

GEORGE C. 'PIG' ADAMS ... caught in South Dakota

Pig Adams Back in Jail

George Clifford (Pig) Adams, 54, the out-a-state, in-again convict, is again behind bars.

Adams has been the object of several area manhunts.

He escaped from the Wyoming State Prison Sept. 9, but time failed to show up here.

Abilene police were notified Saturday that Adams had been caught in Sturgis, S. D., and was off the wanted list. Other details were not known.

It had been felt Adams would shun the local area this time as his family had moved from Hamby to Colorado.

When he escaped, Adams was serving a life sentence as an habitual criminal.

He previously served time at the Texas State Prison.

At the time estimated he had committed 1,000 burglaries since he was discharged from the Army in 1945, and had harvested $60,000 to $70,000 in cash during that time.

He was born in Cisco and lived there until about 1938, when he moved to Hawley with his family. His career in crime began shortly after running away from home when he was in the 10th grade. He joined the Army rather than go to jail for his first offense.

Distinguished Texan

AUSTIN (AP)—Gov. Price Daniel picked John Nance Garner Saturday as a distinguished Texan and proclaimed Nov. 22 as John Nance Garner Day in Texas.

This is the 90th birthday of the former vice president, who held that office eight years under Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Hunt Continues For 2 More Men

HUNTSVILLE, Utah (AP)—Five more of the eight men who parachuted from a crippled C-119 cargo plane were found Saturday night as darkness and blizzards closed in for them.

The plane's commander, Capt. Harry O. Blount, was found short-ly after midnight Friday, but two other men were still missing in the snow-covered mountains of northeastern Utah.

Blount, four other crewmen and three passengers bailed out of the plane Friday when one of the plane's two engines failed en route to Hill Air Force Base at Ogden, Utah, 25 miles east of here.

The plane flew another 150 miles on automatic pilot and crashed in eastern Idaho.

The Weber County searchers found five of the men. The only radio report from the posse was that the men were safe.

Missing Identified

The two men still missing were identified as:

Lt. Donald E. Buet, pilot, Clearfield, Utah. His home town is Andover, N.Y.

Capt. Donald Liggell, navigator, Clearfield, whose home town is Indianapolis, Ind.

Officials identified the rescued men as:

Sgt. Walter P. Bigelow, a reservist from Ogden.

S. Sgt. Ivan Prchazca, a reservist from Kearns, Utah.

M. Sgt. Joseph W. Reagor, Nellis AFB, Las Vegas, Nev.

Tentatively identified were:

Sgt.1/C R. Pettner, being transferred from Ft. Belvoir, Va., to Ft. Lewis, Wash.

R. Copeland, Ft. Bragg, N.C.

Search slogged on through heavy snow in the hunt for the two missing airmen.

Blount was huddled under a tree and wrapped in his parachute for protection when he was found.

Stays With Searchers

The wire Skyline-off Great Falls, Mont., man stayed anxiously by searchers until exhaustion forced him to go to Hill AFB to rest.

Blount ordered the men to abandon the aircraft when he realized it would never cross high mountains on one engine.

The C119 was on the last leg of a flight from Charleston, S.C., via Brooks AFB, Tex., when the trouble occurred.

"They certainly were not dressed for this kind of weather and did not have survival kits," Blount said.

He said all of them, like himself, were only light summer one-piece flying suits.

1st Freeze Forecast Here Tonight

A cold front which is expected to reach Abilene about noon Sunday may bring the first freeze of the year to the area before dawn Monday.

Actually, two separate air masses are expected to bring the cooler weather. A Pacific cold front will arrive first, bringing cool winds from the west. Late Sunday afternoon, the winds should change once to the northwest, heralding the arrival of a polar air mass, which may drop the mercury to 30.

Occasional rain also is forecast for Sunday and Monday.

High Sunday will be in the 60s, and the high Monday about 40, the weather bureau said.

At 9 p.m. Saturday snow was falling in Farmington, N. M.

A heavy snow warning was in effect for the white weekend in eastern Montana, Wyoming, northern Colorado, west and north central Nebraska and most of North Dakota.

Pleasant weather blanketed all of Texas Saturday. Most afternoon temperatures were in the 70s although El Paso had 61 and Lubbock 62.

Pope John May Call Consistory

TO FILL VACANCIES

VATICAN CITY (AP)—Reports are increasing in Vatican circles that Pope John XXIII will call a consistory, apparently for the purpose of filling vacancies in the College of Cardinals.

The Sacred College, with 70 members when at full strength, now has 17 vacancies. The average age of the cardinals left to bear the administrative burdens of the Roman Catholic Church is 73.

Two deaths in the past six months have cut the United States cardinals down to two. Britain has none, neither has Austria. Mexico with 23 million Catholics and the Philippines with 17 million never have had a Prince of the Church.

Most of the speculation here has been that the new Pope, crowned Nov. 4, will name nine or 10 Italians and seven or eight non-Italians for elevation to the purple.

Among these last might be the church's first Negro cardinal to represent what the church has called its "blossoming black flower" of increasing Catholicism in Africa.

He might be gray-haired Most. Joseph Kiwanuka, 46, archbishop of Rhodia, Uganda, who was consecrated bishop by the late Pope Pius XII in St. Peter's Basilica in 1939.

The ranks of United States cardinals were reduced by the deaths of Samuel Cardinal Stritch, Archbishop of Chicago, May 27, and Edward Cardinal Mooney, Archbishop of Detroit, Oct. 21, only a few hours before the opening of the conclave which chose Angelo Giuseppe Cardinal Roncalli as the new Pope.

'FIXING' THE INSPECTOR — Willard A. Foster, postal inspector here, has his name tag pinned on at the annual fall territory meeting of the Texas Branch, National League of Postmasters. Others are, from left, Aubrey A. Dunwody, Anson postmaster; Lucile Fairman, Goldthwaite postmaster; and E. B. Britton, Stamford postmaster. Saturday 58 area postmasters and guests had registered at the Drake Hotel. The meeting will continue through Sunday afternoon.
